

<http://www.KSCBNews.net/news/index.cfm?nk=1553>

Flights to Wichita At A Standstill
(AP) - Garden City officials say discussion about possible flights between Wichita and cities in the Garden City area are at a standstill.

Rachelle Powell, director of aviation at Garden City Regional Airport, says there's still interest in the flights, but funding sources aren't currently available.

Powell met with city officials earlier this month to discuss a feasibility study on the flights. The study found that it would be cheaper to drive than to fly from places like Garden City, Liberal and Dodge City to the Wichita Mid-Continent Airport.

However, Powell says there is still support for the flights because they would save time for travelers.

Currently, no air service connects Wichita to the rest of the state.

Copyright KSCB News