Tall Tales and Trick or Treating

-By Laura Nelson on 10/29/2012

Goodwell, Okla.-The No Man's Land Museum and Oklahoma Panhandle State University have teamed up this year to offer free Halloween fun for trick-or-treaters of all ages!

Stop by the museum any time between 6-8 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 31, and listen to storytellers Sara Jane Richter, Pauline Hodges, Tony Hardman and Jon Olsen recount extraordinary tales. Each will be in a different room; ask at the front desk for more information. During the same time, residents of Holter Hall will once again be waiting for all of the ghosts and goblins to come inside and gather treats. Feel free to come and go as you wish between both events.

Both activities are appropriate for all ages, so plan now to make these two events part of your Halloween celebration!
