Swing Band Coming To Liberal Memorial Library

Swing on down to the Liberal Memorial Library and get ready for an evening, outdoor concert with the "Swingin' Saints Jazz Band" on Monday, Oct. 7 at 6:30 p.m.

It's free to the public so bring a lawn chair and listen to music from the Big Band Era of the 1930s and 1940s. It also might be appropriate to bring your dancing shoes.

Under the direction of Seward County Community Instrumental Music Instructor Darin Workman, the band is comprised of 14-18 community and student musicians, who will take you back to the days when Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman were the kings of swing and ruled the music world.

You'll hear the combination of trombones, trumpets, and saxophones along with the piano, drums and bass that will bring you back to an era gone by. Memories will start flowing and the urge to get up and start swinging and dancing may overtake you.

Come down to the library, bring a lawn chair and enjoy what sure will be a wonderful trip down memory lane and an exciting new experience for those who have never heard the Big Band sound.
