No Blackout For Sunday's Chiefs Game

Kansas City Chiefs fans will be able to watch Sunday's game on TV after all.

Spokesman Pete Moris told The Associated Press late Thursday afternoon there will be no blackout of the matchup with the Tennessee Titans.

The Chiefs had said Wednesday that a blackout was a possibility, with slow ticket sales for a game expected to be played on a very cold day when many people will be busy with family events.

Tickets remained available late Thursday. But the team has met NFL requirements for avoiding a blackout.
